

The Tenth Birthday Party

For his tenth birthday, Carlos wanted to have a party at the neighborhood pool. Together, he and his mother made invitations for the party so that Carlos could send one to each of his friends.

On the morning of his birthday, he ran outside to check the weather. Carlos was relieved to see a bright sunny sky. His mother said, "Well, it looks like a perfect day for a Birthday party. Now let's have breakfast, and then we'll get everything ready to take you the pool."

As Carlos and his mother drove to the pool, Carlos noticed some dark clouds forming in the sky. "Oh, I hope it isn't going to rain," he said, remembering that lifeguards always closed the pool when there was lightning in the area.

Huge drops of rain splattered against the car's windshield as Carlos and his mom pulled into the parking lot. As he stepped out of the car, Carlos heard a clap of thunder and then the lifeguard's whistle.

"Everybody out of the pool!" the lifeguard yelled.

Carlos's mother gave him a hug and said, "Oh am so sorry that the weather didn't cooperate with us. I know how much you were looking forward to swimming."

Carlos saw his friends gathered under the awning of the pool building. When he spotted Carlos, the friends clapped loudly and began to sing happy birthday. Carlos went to greet his friends and was able to find a table covered with many things to eat and some brightly wrapped presents.

"Why don't you open this present right away," said Carlos's friend Molly.

Carlos opened the brightly wrapped present and found the board game he had been waiting for.

The Tenth Birthday Party

For his tenth birthday, Carlos wanted to have a party at the neighborhood pool. Together, he and his mother made cards for the party so that Carlos can send one to each of his friends.

On the morning of his birthday, he ran outside to check the weather he was relieved to see a bright blue sky. His mother said, "Well, it look like a perfect day for a birthday party. Now let's have breakfast, and _____ we'll get everything ready to take to the pool."

As Carlos and his family drove to the pool, Carlos noticed the dark clouds forming in the sky. "_____, I hope it isn't going to rain," he said, remembering that lifeguards always guard the pool when there was lighting in the area.

Huge drops of rain hit against the car's windshield as Carlos and his mom pulled into the parking lot. As he stepped out of the car, Carlos heard a clap of thunder and then the lifeguard's whistle.

"Everybody out of the pool!" the lifeguard yelled.

Carlos's Mom gave him a hug and said, "I am so sorry that the weather _____ cooperated with us. I know how _____ you were looking forward to swimming."

_____ Carlos saw his friends gathered under _____ awning of the pool building. When _____ spotted Carlos, the friends clapped loudly _____ began to sing happy birthday. Carlos _____ to greet his friends and was _____ to find a table covered with _____ things to eat and some brightly _____ presents.

"Why don't you open this _____ right away," said Carlos's friend Molly.

_____ opened the brightly wrapped present and _____ the board game he had been _____.

The Tenth Birthday Party

For his tenth birthday, Carlos wanted to have a party at the neighborhood pool. Together, he and his mother made invitations for the party so that Carlos could send one to each of his friends.

On the morning of his birthday, Carlos ran outside to check the weather and was relieved to see a bright sunny sky. His mother said, "Well, it looks like a perfect day for a birthday party. Now let's have breakfast, and then we'll get everything ready to take to the pool."

As Carlos and his mother drove to the pool, Carlos noticed that dark clouds forming in the sky. "Gosh, I hope it isn't going to rain," he said, remembering that lifeguards always closed the pool when there was lightning hitting the area.

Huge drops of rain drops against the car's windshield as Carlos and his mom pulled into the parking lot. As he stepped out of the car, Carlos heard a clap of thunder and then the lifeguard's whistle.

"Everybody out of the pool!" the lifeguard yelled.

Carlos's mom gave him a hug and said, "Carlos am so sorry that the weather _____ cooperated with us. I know how _____ you were looking forward to swimming."

_____ Carlos saw his friends gathered under _____ awning of the pool building. When _____ spotted Carlos, the friends clapped loudly _____ began to sing happy birthday. Carlos _____ to greet his friends and was _____ to find a table covered with _____ things to eat and some brightly _____ presents.

"Why don't you open this _____ right away," said Carlos's friend Molly.

_____ opened the brightly wrapped present and _____ the board game he had been _____.

Mom

The Tenth Birthday Party

For his tenth birthday, Carlos wanted to have a party at the neighborhood pool. Together, he and his mother made invitations for the party so that Carlos could send one to each of his friends.

On the morning of his birthday, he ran outside to check the weather and was relieved to see a bright sunny sky. His mother said, "Well, it looks like a perfect day for a birthday party. Now let's have breakfast, and then we'll get everything ready to take to the pool."

As Carlos and his mother drove to the pool, Carlos noticed some dark clouds forming in the sky. "Well, I hope it isn't going to rain," he said, remembering that lifeguards always close the pool when there was lightning in the area.

Huge drops of rain splattered against the car's windshield as Carlos noticed his mom pulled into the parking lot. As he stepped out of the car, Carlos heard a clap of thunder and then the lifeguard's whistle.

"Everybody out of the pool!" the lifeguard yelled.

Carlos's mother gave him a hug and said, "I am so sorry that the weather didn't cooperated with us. I know how much you were looking forward to swimming."

Then Carlos saw his friends gathered under the awning of the pool building. When they spotted Carlos, the friends clapped loudly and began to sing happy birthday. Carlos went to greet his friends and was happy to find a table covered with some things to eat and some brightly colored presents.

"Why don't you open this one right away," said Carlos's friend Molly.

Carlos opened the brightly wrapped present and found the board game he had been wanting.

"This is great," Carlos exclaimed, "because even though we can't swim, we can have fun playing this game."

The friends didn't notice the rain as they enjoyed Carlos's new game. Later, they ate a good lunch of sandwiches, followed by Carlos's birthday carrot cake.

Carlos watched the raindrops fall against the pool's surface and the clouds move across the sky. This had not been the party he planned, but it turned out to be a terrific party after all.

The Tenth Birthday Party

For his tenth birthday, Carlos wanted to have a party at the neighborhood pool. Together, he and his mother made invitations for the party so that Carlos could send one to each of his friends.

On the morning of his birthday, Carlos ran outside to check the weather and was relieved to see a bright blue sky. His mother said, "Well, it looks like a perfect day for a birthday party. Now let's have breakfast, and then we'll get everything ready to take to the pool."

As Carlos and his mom drove to the pool, Carlos noticed many dark clouds forming in the sky. "gee, I hope it isn't going to rain," he said, remembering that lifeguards always close the pool when there was lightning around the area.

Huge drops of rain fell against the car's windshield as Carlos and his mom pulled into the parking lot. As he stepped out of the car, Carlos heard a clap of thunder and then the lifeguard's whistle.

"Everybody out of the pool!" the lifeguard yelled.

Carlos's mom gave him a hug and said, "I am so sorry that the weather didn't cooperated with us. I know how much you were looking forward to swimming."

Then Carlos saw his friends gathered under The awning of the pool building. When They spotted Carlos, the friends clapped loudly and began to sing happy birthday. Carlos began to greet his friends and was happy to find a table covered with great things to eat and some brightly colored presents.

"Why don't you open this one right away," said Carlos's friend Molly.

Carlos opened the brightly wrapped present and started the board game he had been wanting.

[REDACTED]

"This is great," Carlos exclaimed, "because _____ though we can't swim, we can have fun playing this game."

The friends _____ noticed the rain as they enjoyed _____ new game. Later, they ate a _____ lunch of sandwiches, followed by Carlos's _____ carrot cake.

Carlos watched the raindrops _____ against the pool's surface and the _____ move across the sky. This had not been the party he planned, but it turned out to be a terrific party after all.